

ACCESS THE AKASHIC

Contact: web@johngilbertscientist.com

22nd Issue / January 28, 2016

- I. Olmec Colossal Heads and the Wise Kings of Africa
- II. Ancient Chinese Interpretation of Tinnitus
- III. Usage of the Witch's Hat Fungus
- IV. UFO's Over Washington D.C. 1952

-

Olmec Warrior Statue, La Venta, Tabasco, Mexico

Clairvoyance on the grand and majestic past does not necessarily do it justice and must be set aside until proper time and guidance can be granted to perform the deeds properly. Let us take a preliminary overview of the Olmec heads. Date: approx 2000 B.C. Wise Kings of Africa. An Initiate Society. Jewelry makers. They built the heads by hand, cutting them night and day with a razor sharp implement. Friends. Builders. Good people. Fleet of 25 ships came over. It's possible that they purchased the boats and did not build them. The area they settled at was believed to be powerful. The Africans today are not direct descendents, as it is similarly with Ancient Greek, Chinese, etc (it is not to rule out spiritual/other links to the present of course). They were a ship-faring people. The author believes that there was a ship-building trade in South America in those days (as well as in Africa or its locality). They had seen most of North and South America, but maybe not all of the Pacific. Maybe it was a hurricane that eventually brought their numbers down. It was a long and cold journey. They utilized stellar navigation. They were friends among the ancient peoples.

-

Ancient Chinese divination and interpretation of the tinnitus sounds in the ears. The source of this information is not known. The point is not to take a literal approach to this seemingly simple wisdom. Chances are it is not esoteric and simply an outline for making your own interpretations of phantom-like tinnitus. Note that the time of day (meaning: timing) is important, as with any synchronicity or magic. As you can see it is weird indeed. The point is that you can receive information in so many various ways and that it has to be structured so that you do not believe that chaos itself is completely meaningful, but instead look for individualistic ways you can interact with some unknown forces, etc.

Ancient Chinese Ancient Chinese Divination and Interpretation of Tinnitus (耳鳴)
 Ancient Chinese believes Tinnitus is a way heaven send messages to them.
 Having tinnitus in left ear and right ear significant different meaning. Experiencing Tinnitus at different hours of the day, the message may differ. So if one have Tinnitus at 1300 in his right ear may means he is having visits from relatives; whereas if he has Tinnitus at 1600 in the same right ear, he is expecting good news.

Ancient Chinese Interpretation of Tinnitus (耳鳴)
 23:00 to 01:00 Left: An opposite sex is thinking of you.
 Right: Financial loss or may experience theft.
 01:00 to 03:00 Left: Arguments or disagreement.
 Right: You are facing a legal case.
 03:00 to 05:00 Left: Financial loss or may experience theft.
 Right: Some matters to worry about.
 05:00 to 07:00 Left: Unpleasant or misfortune.
 Right: You've got visitors.
 07:00 to 09:00 Left: Travelling soon.
 Right: You've got visitors.
 09:00 to 11:00 Left: You are meeting mishaps.
 Right: Luck and successful, a wish will be obtained.
 11:00 to 13:00 Left: You've got visitors from far land.
 Right: A visit from your relatives.
 13:00 to 15:00 Left: Wine and good meals.
 Right: You've got visitors.
 15:00 to 17:00 Left: On a trip soon.
 Right: Good news.
 17:00 to 19:00 Left: Financial loss.
 Right: Lucky and success.
 19:00 to 21:00 Left: Wine and good meals.
 Right: You've got visitors.
 21:00 to 23:00 Left: Great fortune and good news.
 Right: wine and good meals.

Finally some information on the usage of witch's hat mushroom.

Note: this picture is not the only variety of witch's hat.

The author has personally seen a more orange and pointed variety in North Florida.

You will unmistakably know it is the type upon seeing it.

Witch's hat got its name from actual witchcraft usage. Whether this began with the European or Native American tribes, or several millions years before them, it does not matter a whole lot. Here is the scoop. It is used in potions. You do not ingest or eat it. It will send you to seek medical help if you ingest it. It is useful in witchcraft. It has a dark entity. It will connect you to the witch who is residing in it from a very long time ago. It can be used in rites of the full moon, rites of power, second sight, and clairvoyance. This is a secret art that no one knows about (-except now, JG). It is a visionary herb. It is not necessarily classed alongside the well-known baneful herbs, since its use has not been divulged. The author has not personally tried it at all. Only an experienced witch could use it properly. Most psychedelics are considered drugs and likewise contain certain chemicals that are detectable. A witching herb of this magnitude may not have any specific chemical constituents that reflect its spiritual nature (ie it involves 'activation'). It is visionary and other worldly, widely unknown in our day as to its proper usage. It is also satanic (perceive). It may be in a class all its own, connected to other more etheric and underworld kind of plants that have strong spiritual entities attached to or within them. It can also make things disappear. As with all things witchcraft, it depends on the operator at hand. It has a bad side too, if used under the wrong circumstances. Please be careful, it is assumed that if you experiment with witch's hat you will have already learned the basics of your craft.

-

And now for something completely different...

The infamous UFO's over Washington D.C. 1952.

What are they? Who are they? What are the various physical and etheric levels in the cosmographic semblances of UFO interdimensional reality and so on? Perception is key, but here is one that is easily considered, believe it or not. So here goes,

Directly from the clairvoyance: Insectoid bugs. Really really strange. Their reasons for visiting are not exactly comprehensible. Big eyed insects. And there's a billion more of them. It's really ODD. There is even a disgusting Queen. Maybe they just thought they could benefit by merely showing up (!?!). With stuff like this, it is definitely outside the limits of human minds. Possible origin: SE of Arcturus, SW of Alphecca. Reminder: Stars and other solar systems have varying degrees of existence in relationship to our definition of such facts.

